Ferry Talks Fail, Walkout Looms

Contract talks between the B.C. Ferry Authority and 2,000 unlicensed marine staff broke off Friday and a union spokesman said today signs are pointing towards a strike.

Norman Thornber, business agent of the marine branch (unlicensed) of the B.C. Government Employees Union, said the union executive will meet Monday noon to consider its Bargaining has continued on and off all week and Friday reached "a complete stalemate," said Thornber.

He said he believes Transport Minister Robert Strachan has been ill-informed on the progress of talks and thinks the union has been offered an attractive package when actually it has been offered very little.

"We're not asking for the moon, just a package to live with until bargaining rights for all government employees

Thornber said the unlicensed branch had done as well or better in bargaining with the former Socred government.

"We've been living on promises — 'wait until next year' so long we're beginning to feel like the B.C. Lions," he said.

Bargaining between the authority and both licensed and unlicensed ferry employees began early last month. Licensed employees, who number about 400, are bargaining separately.

The only previous ferry strike involving the whole fleet was in 1968, lasting two weeks but coming in February. Ferry traffic is currently at a summer tourist peak, illustrated by the 11:15 p.m. sailing from Swartz Bay Friday night, needed to clean up 129 vehicles left after the usual 10 p.m. final sailing for the night.

Salmon NEWS Export Price Up

VANCOUVER (CP) - Britwancourben (CF) — Briling has Columbia Packers Ltd., the province's largest fish processing company, has raised its export price of sockeye salmon by more than 40 per cent over last year.

The company is offering sockeye to foreign buyers for $50 a carton of 48 half-pound cans compared with up to $35 in 1972, said company president Richard Nelson.

He said Friday the company continues to withhold products from the domestic market and has not set a domestic price, although it doesn't normally vary signifi-cantly from the export price

He said a price offer will not be quoted until the market stabilizes, probably in about a week when major sockeye runs end.

nor Dan Evans of Washington state is requesting the British Columbia government to supply water to Point Roberts, on an emergency basis, a spokesman said Friday.

Evans' press secretary, Jay Fredrecksen, said the letter to Premier Dave Barrett points out the "critical situation" in the border area.

But it appeared unlikely the letter would get quick, if any, action. Barrett is still in action. Barrett is still in Prince Edward Island at the premiers' conference and Re-sources Minister Bob Williams, who would be responsi-ble for water sales, was water sales, was bound for Finland.

The Point Roberts water board requested Evans to in-tervene after a B.C. provincial official refused to autho-rize Delta to sell water, the board's chairman Harry Sames said his water board wrote to Williams in February concerning water sales to tide Point Roberts over the late summer dry period. But, he said, Williams never replied.

Meanwhile, Sames said stringent restrictions on water are in force in the communi Its million-gallon tank is wn to about 234,000 gallons and the demand is increasing.

At a Thursday night meetboard threatened to turn off the water supply to an estimated 850 Canadian users living on the 3,100-acre American pen-insula. He said if B.C.'s position is that Canadian resources should be for Canadians, then it followed that American resources should be reserved for Americans.

Sames said Point Roberts' water is currently supplied from two wells. The 1,100 water metre users are charged 55 each a month for water and for a continuous drilling program to locate more wells.

The situation now is bad; he said. "If a house or church caught fire I don't know if we could afford the drinking water to put it out."

The board would like to buy about 200,000 gallons a day from Delta, filling the tanks during off-peak hours. But if thet avenue is closed, then water will have to be trucked

Sames said Blaine already supplies water to the southern area of Surrey.

Israel Nabs Iraqi Jet FRESH ATTACK ON PEKING In Hunt for Guerrillas MOSCOW (UPI) - The Soviet Union, after months of virtually ignoring China, has killed.

BEIRUT (AP) - Israeli jets dodged anti-aircraft fire Friday night to pirate an radia airliner in what sources called an unsuccessful attempt to kidnap top Palestinian guerrilla leaders.

However, the guerrillas were not on the airliner, and the Israelis allowed it to return to Beirut after they que tined the 74 passengers and eight crew members for two hours at an Israeli airfield.

The informants said that among the Palestinians the Israelis were trying to capture was Dr. George Habash, head of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

Guerrilla sources said Habash was booked on the Baghdad-bound plane with Salah Salah, another of the front's representatives on the Liberation Organization's executive committee, and Abdul Wahab Kayali, the secretary-general of the Iraqibacked Arab Liberation Movement.

Habash, on Israel's most-vanted list since his group hijacked three planes to Jor-dan three years ago and blew them up, changed the group's travel plans at the last minute in what has become a stan-dard security tactic among top guerrilla leaders, the informants said.

Other reports said there were two Iraqi Airlines flights to Baghdad scheduled to leave within minutes of each other and the Israelis diverted the wrong plane. The reports said the Israelis pirated charter Flight 006a on the presumption that it was the regularly scheduled Flight 006, was delayed because of its air space. In the past, Israel has denounced Arab hijackings as international crimes that should be dealt with harshly,

The manoeuvre was carried out with the Israelis' typical clockwork precision minutes after the airliner took off from Beirut. The Israeli jets screamed into Lebanese air space at 9:45 p.m. local time. Two jets peeled out of formation to intercept the French-built Caravelle jetliner, and the other intruders formed a protective umbrella overhead.

Captain George Matta, the anliner's commander, ra-dioed the Beirut control tower that he was obeying the Israe-li planes because he didn't want "a repeat of the Libyanthing." This was a reference

The premiers, during their two-day conference which ended Friday, also called for unilateral federal action if necessary to manage and con-serve Canada's offshore fisheries resources to at least 200 miles off the east and west

The premiers said that posi-tion should be pursued vi-gorously at the next interna-tional law of the sea confer-

Take the robin; by any standard you choose, dear old robin red-breast has to rank as one of the best known, popular and beloved of North

Ever since European in migrants found this large red-breasted American thrush, and tagged it with the name of a completely different, but similar-looking bird of their homeland, the robin has held an almost-impeccable place in our hearts.

A large part of this appeal must lie in the robin's record of heralding the end of winter in many parts of the continent. But even after spring has made her often-reluctant appearance, robins still entrance us with their antics around our gardens settling territorial disputes, building nests and ultimately ramming copious quantities of insects into cavernous containers pop-ularly called young robins.

It is this confident accep-tance of human intruders into their domain that, more than anything else, has ensured the robin's exalted position in the bird popularity lists.

Only occasionally has their welcome worn a little thin, such as at 4:30 on a June morning when their dawn morning when their carolling can effectively put finis to a good night's sleep; or when a ravenous gang of them descends on a coveted cherry tree and proceeds to partake of the juicy repast we se reluctantly provided. It is this taste for fruit, wild a sudden decline in robin popularity in parts of Cana maritme provinces. There, particularly in northern New Brunswick, bands of foraging robins stocking up in prepara tion for their move south, have come across a manmade feast, namely, wall-towall blueberries.

Being completely unaware of the laws of supply and demand, cash crops, property rights and the like, the robins have pitched in with abandon and sizable percentages of this valuable crop have disappeared into their gastro-intestinal tracts

A secondary, and readily predictable result, has been a sudden rise in the temperaof the farmers con-

Faced with this threat to one of their few reliable sources of cash, the blueberry growers have fought back with every means at their dis-posal. One of these, the shot-gun loaded with bird shot, meant the end for thousands of robins last year.

From a purely biological point of view, the death of a few thousand robins is proba-bly a drop in the bucket. From a emotional point of view, however, the ripples from that drop in the bucket have been surging back and forth across the continent, upforth across the conuncia, up-setting thoughtful people who feel there must be other ways, short of killing the birds, to effectively protect the crops.

Bargain Day for Critics

NDP Leader Lewis' threat this week to call off his support of the Liberal government contains almost as much danger for his party as it does for Prime Minister Trudeau's administration. If action by Mr. Lewis resulted in the fall of the government and a general election took place, high food prices might be a good campaign issue. The only trouble is, the NDP would have to come up with a program of lower prices which would convince the public. So far, that has not happened.

The NDP is on record, through its leader, as urging that the federal Food Prices Review Board should be given the power to prohibit unjustified increases in food prices as well as merely report them as at present — which surely is another way of saying "price control." Yet Mr. Lewis spurns price controls, even the limited type such as the United States nor could a Conservative governtried out, and says anyone - including Conservative Leader Stanfield - who advocates them is "irresponsible".

So, presumably Mr. Lewis would lead his party into an election under the banner of "Control of prices but no price control."

The fact is, of course, that no western industrialized country, whatever its government, has mastered the inflationary spiral. Britain, the United States, West Germany, Japan, Italy, Canada they and others are all suffering the effects of rising prices and no government has successfully coped with the problem. To single out Canada's government as delinquent because it has not done what no other government has been able to do is merely to play the old political game. An NDP government in Ottawa could not solve inflation, ment do in Canada what Conservative governments have failed to do in Britain or the United States.

That is not an argument for doing nothing, for ameliorative efforts should be made. But there is no magic wand to do the job, and Finance Minister Turner's insistence that anti-inflationary efforts can only be effective on an international basis has the ring of cold

In any case, Mr. Lewis is not likely to have the responsibility for anti-inflationary management thrust upon him soon by an eager electorate. His threat to unseat the government is a hollow one, obviously designed for the consumption of some restive elements in his party. For he cannot vote against the government while Parliament is not even sitting. There will be no rug-pulling at least until the late

Government by Conference

The Charlottetown premiers' conference is busy urging a new federal-provincial energy conference and discussing the methodology of transferring federal health funds to provincial coffers. The public shrugs and says it's all part of the grinding process by which this country is governed. But is it? The decision-making body in Canada is supposed to be the House of Commons. In recent years, however, there has been a tendency toward government by conference.

Almost by osmosis the provinces and even the municipalities have increasingly intruded in the federal realm.

Changing social values and Canada's endemic regionalism are always eating away at the federal preserves, despite the clear-cut delineations of the British North America Act. The Western conference on economic opportunities is an example. By giving the proyinces unprecedented powers in the banking field, the federal government relinquished an important might reshuffle current responsibilities so they would be more in keeping with the times. Yet the federal and provincial governments can not even agree on the means to change the constitution. So the attrition of federal power may continue bit by bit, clause by

Without a strong central government, however, Canada's vast expanse would be impossible to govern, and balkanization would be inevitable. Provincial and municipal politicans should keep that in mind as they push against the central bulwark.

He railed against Britain's policies towards Rhodesia and South Africa, adding that "We will have no alternative but to wage a hot war against imperialist minorities in that part of our

Extermination Policy

Mr. Amin also sneered about the recent British visit of the Portuguese prime minister. It appeared as if Britain wanted to thank Premier Murcel Caetona for the policy of extermination he was carrying on in Portuguese Africa.

In choosing to fob off the Ugandan leader's speech as an aberration, the ravings of a bit player in some black opera bouffe, Canada looks especially hypocritical.

The Commonwealth, with its 26 Black and Asian members, has always been a hallowed tenet of our foreign policy, yet even the crown corporation of Polymer has large South African holdings. And good old Alcan offered shares "... to all white employees and a significant number of Asian employees and some African employees," according to a South African newspaper.

Any political clout it once had disappeared over the horizon along with the sun sinking on the British empire.

Britain's eyes are turned to Europe; the Asian and African countries are looking at themselves, and the older white Commonwealths are developing a squint looking far afield for new economic opportunities.

Rude Fellow

The 33 member nations still can afford "a penny for the Old Guy" but a rude fellow like Mr. Amin doesn't know

Yet the mercurial Ugandan leader's speech had its poignant aspects. What better arena to criticize African racial injustices than the Commonwealth representing 850 million people of diverse racial heritages?

And, at the same time, why didn't any Asian nations point the finger at Uganda for expelling 40,000 East Asians?

Certainly, Mr. Amin could also be accused of racism. But the Commonwealth prefers to ignore the issues that divide it most-perhaps for fear of destroying the venerable organization. It seems, howown bulls by the horns, it would be a more vigorous institution.

Go down to the salt marsh flats at Goldstream Park and you will find a vast difference from any other part of the park, yet it is part of the whole.

Here you can find the glasswort, and growing on it, the doddar, which is a parasite and lives on the host. If you examine it you will find that it is rather beautiful in its own particular way. The glasswort can be eaten as a salad, although it is somewhat salty.

The sea milkwort and several kinds of plantain can also be found on the salt marsh flats. Look along the sides of the sedge flats and see the gumweed with its sticky burrs, the yarrow with its pungent smell will be beside it. This too can be made into a rather bitter tea and is said to be an excellent "kidney cleaner."

Along the banks of the river there is sweet clover growing to a height of six feet. This plant was introduced from Like Jack Scott I often pick up hitchhikers although it is a bit irksome to find sometimes that they are only going a few blocks, well within what I would consider walking distance. I would probably view the whole situation of hitch-hiking in general, with somewhat less equanimity if it were not for the fact of being reconciled to the realization that the white race has had its day. Hitchikers are merely a symbol of the fact. In the following verse, written that way for the sake of brevity, I pose a question to which I have yet to receive an answer.

The Hitch-Hiker

A New House on the Bay

The little brown cottage, in summer brightly faced with flowers, nestled for so many years at the corner of Beach Drive and Monterey that it seemed a permanent landmark. But it's gone now, along with the garden play-house that is remembered vividly by a whole generation of Oak Bay residents who once attended Miss Irene Ross's kindergarten and play

A new house has risen where she made her home for more than 40 years. Its big windows are designed to take in every inch of the view she brooded over so lovingly - the sparkling waters of Shoal Bay and its rocky western point, Trial Island with its winking light, the busy strait and the ever-changing backdrop of the blue Olympics. My wife and I live there now with Vicky the Schnauzer.

Integral Part

The cottage and garden themselves were an integral part of Miss Ross's life. They represented her triumph in making her own way in the world, and in some ways her triumph over herself, for she wrestled constantly to curb an impatient and sometimes headstrong nature. When roused she was wasp-like, as a female relative who belittled the cottage was to learn. She was left $5 in Miss Ross's will "to buy herself a cat to keep her com-

That was a side the children never saw. The tall, slim teacher with the dark, swept-back hair was firm but always loving. She guided the little ones toward the independence of spirit which she valued so much. The most she asked of anyone was that they behaved sensibly. If in doing so they returned her affection, that was a super-bonus. She abominated sham and pretension at all

Her early days were difficult. She bought her house and ran her kindergarten and existed on a shoestring, ignoring the well-meant criticisms of a domineering family. Hardship never stilled her laughter. In later life things were easier and she divided her time between Victoria and Pasadena. She came back to the little cottage to die.

Little Brown Cottage

Hard up or otherwise, the philosophy toward which she strove never changed. It was to help people, lovingly, unquesningly, without thought of return. She had a special place for waifs, strays and odd-men-out. Sometimes she had to bite her tongue to keep from snapping at fools but she worked hard at that too. In her modest library was a little book entitled "Daily Strength for Daily

Needs." Her notes pencilled on the flyleaf direct the way to well-read passages. Almost all are concerned with the need for patience and self-restraint. Such "The exercise of patience involves a continual practice of the presence of God; for we may be come upon at any moment for an almost heroic display of good temper, and it is a short road to unselfishness, for nothing is left to self; all that seems to belong most intimately to self, to be self's property, such as time, home and rest, are invaded by these continual trials of patience. The family is full of such opportunities."

Beach Walk

Until ill health defeated her, she liked to walk along the beach at Shoal Bay toward the rocks at the western end. She was troubled that the elderly and handicapped could not scramble over the logs or make their way in the loose shingle, and she left money to Oak Bay municipality to begin a secure footway along the shore. A plaque commemorates her kindness but the work appears to have been abandoned.

The only tangible reminders left of her home are the trees and green hedges and granite gate posts. (Someone stole the old-wrought iron gate during demolition proceedings.) But memories hover

There are times when we call to one another to come and see a tug swinging a long boom of logs around Trial Island, or a sailboat tilting by, or a majestic freighter heading out to the Pacific There are times when we sit in quiet contemplation of light shifting on the rocks and water. These are moments when one half expects to turn and see the gentle smile and tender gaze. aunt, Irene Ross, was happiest when seeing others happy.

There's a Lot at Stake Setting Sea Boundaries

By MAXWELL COHEN

Iceland and Britain skir mishing awkwardly over fish; pretending she can pollute the atmosphere and the seas in the South Pacific with strained grandeur and impunity; great factory fleets scooping up the herring in the Atlantic and the Pacific and risking the disappearance of a species; the continental shelves or "margins" of a score of states promising new petroleum and mineral riches to their costal sovereigns; the seabed beyond these "shelves" claimed for all mankind and so owned by eveveryone and no one these, from the Arctic and its fragile environment to the terrain, the states of the world are about to debate and set a new high policy, for the old high seas. The last meet-ing of the UN Seabed Committee began last month to prepare for the Third Law of the Sea Conference in Santiago in the Spring of 1974.

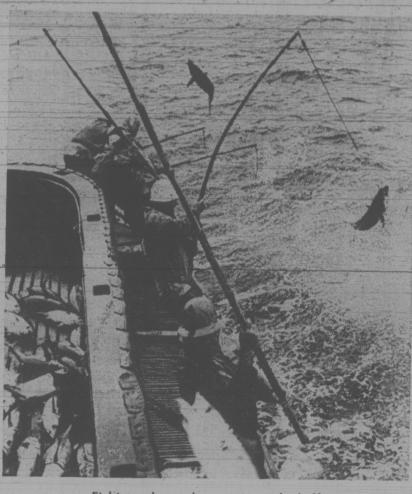

With the world's longest coast-line on three oceans and the planet's second largest continental shelf-margin (one quarter of the land mass of Canada itself), the Canadian people have a vital concern for the fate of the oceans. The issues have been in the making for decades. Indeed, it took the great debates of the 17th and 18th centuries to settle in law what navigation, commerce and exploration were determining in fact—that no state could claim the seas beyond modest distances from its coast and the oceans were the property of all, to be used by all.

For over three hundred years four or five principles had been able to satisfy the needs of states — mostly West Europeans, with Britain, doing the exploring, trading and the occupying of new lands across the waters. These principles were the freedom of the open seas; the doctrine of territorial waters, mostly limited to three miles; a contiguous zone for coastal policing; the nationality of ships determined by their flags; the right of "innocent passage" through territorial waters and straits; piracy — these were enough to provide a crude but workable regime.

Swept Clean

But the complexity of navigation and the rise of traffic required agreements on the Rules of the Road, safety at sea, while private enterprise through insurance and professtandards became a secondary guarantor for a secure commerce. Equally important the historic role of fisheries had escalated into significant sources of world protein. The new factory fleets of Russia and Japan were good examples of modern technology sweeping the ocean of its produce. Then came a new discovery: the continental shelf, which Harry Truman defined with his son ereign claims in 1945, was based on the geological knowledge that these shelves might be rich sources of minerals. petroleum and natural gas.

Legal concepts thus were married to geology and a new era began of claiming jurisdiction seaward for the seabed,

Fishing along the continental shelf to distances that had been unclaimed since the "closed seas" 300 years before. Here were seeds of conflict. For the shelf was, if anything, to be justified on the grounds that it was only the land mass of the continent covered by a narrow depth of sea, e.g. 100 to 200 meters. The subjacent waters above were left untouched by this sovereign assertion.

Once that game of the shelf claimed by the coastal state was begun the path was clear for kindred oceanic claims, whether shelf-based or not. Peru and Ecuador were soon demanding a belt of 200 miles seaward from their coast where they had little shelf to speals of. They converted the shelf argument into a general resources rationale. For the Humboldt Current and other reasons created vast fishing grounds within 200 miles of their shores and these had been historically linked to the people and their primitive economies. It was a short step to claim general jurisdiction, almost territorial waters, with its near-sovereignty, because this resource was as significant for them as the seabed and its subsoil were for Truman and the others blessed

But the consequences of such a mixture of new concepts were far-reaching. By the middle 1950s the World Court had extended coastal jurisdiction, in the Norwegian Fisheries Case, so that a state with a heavily indented coast and archipelagoes could measure its territorial waters from the outermost islands and rocks.

Similarly there was a revival of the doctrine of Historic Waters influenced in part by the persistent and reorganized claim of historic bays. In short, fish, petroleum, navigation, scientific research, coastal defence, the shelf, and the threat of increased traffic in petroleum, and other hazardous products, to the marine environment, were all posing challenges to the stability of the old oceanic order.

Then, too, men already recognized the expired reasoning for a three or four miles coastal belt in the name of security. It was inadequate for military purposes and yet states were reluctant to agree on a wider line where sovereignty would exclude everyone but for the rights of transit—"innocent passage." The combined effect of all of these issues resulted in the Law of the Sea Conferences in 1958 and 1960.

Technology Limit

Here very important doctrines were codified and developed concerning the territorial sea, the continental shelf, and the conservation of the living resources of the sea, but no agreement was reached on the breadth of the territorial sea itself. Almost of equal importance were two significant ambiguities: the first concerned the fact that in describing the continental shelf in terms of a depth of 200 meters, there was the additional test of "exploitability."

In short, the most advanced nations could, under this Convention, make claims to the limit of their technology. The second ambiguity in the four Conventions was the absence of a comprehensive program for the effective conservation of the living resources of the sea; and the inadequate preparations for the era of pollution, threatening the marine environment which the age of the super-tanker, and the industrial debris from the world's land mass, now posed with increasing rapidity.

Behind all this lay the image of riches on the seabed and subsoil, beyond the limits of national jurisdiction, that is beyond the shelves or margins themselves. And so from 1967 onward states have been moving under a series of UN Resolutions toward two prime objectives: first, a new regime for ocean space and the management of its resources with the protection of the marine environment; and, second, toward a system of common ownership in the name of all mankind of the resources of the seabed beyond national limits and these to be exploited by and in the name of the international community.

The Stockholm Conference of 1972 on the Human Environment alerted the world to the threat the oceans faced from hazards and pollutants. Principles adopted there became a kind of "soft law" for many of the issues now to be debated over the use and misuse of the seas. Similarly conferences on Ocean Dumping and oil spills (1969 and 1972) as well as intentional discharges at sea (1973) all have focused on safeguarding ocean space as the common heritage of mankind.

But the crowning political and juridical effort is to be the unification of these many individual thrusts into one comprehensive restatement of the law. That restatement would somehow balance coastal state interests and claims with those of the international community, from resource questions to environmental damage. That is the grand object of the Third

Law of the Sea Conference in Santiago next spring.

The main questions to be resolved from both a Canadian and international standpoint at the Santiago Conference are:

1. What jurisdiction shall coastal states be entitled to claim with respect to the living resources of the sea adjacent to or having some tangible relationship to their coasts?

coasts?

2. What is the extent of an acceptable claim over the continental shelf-margin, with the "margin" including what is known as the "slope" and the "rise" before the geological formation drops down to the bed of the sea — in Canada's case about 400 miles off the east coast?

3. What type of agency in the name of the community of nations will administer and exploit the seabed beyond the limits of national jurisdiction, however defined?

4. Is there a special zone or region which coastal states should be able to claim for purposes of environmental protection as Canada already has done both in the Arctic and off its east and west coasts?

5. Is the concept of 'innocent passage', particularly through narrow waters, now to be altered and controlled because of the hazards that attach to so many types of cargo, particularly the supertanker as the most striking illustration?

6. Should there be a general, global marine pollution treaty embracing all phases of this problem? And how will such a treaty deal with the most serious source of oceanic pollution — about 80% of it — namely, the runoff from the internal rivers, lakes and from the atmosphere of the industrialized continents?

What Balance?

7. What legitimate balance can be drawn between coastal security in the age of missiles and planes and the interference, through any such meaningful rule in favour of the coastal state, with the freedoms of the seas for other states?

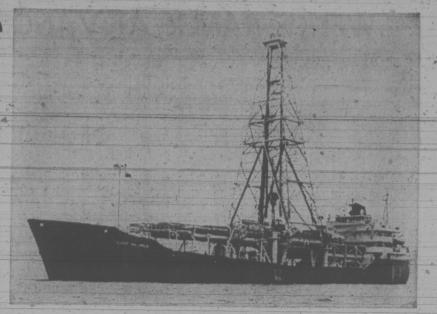

8. What special regard can a comprehensive treaty pay to the unique features of a semi-closed oceanic area, such as the Arctic Basin, where Canada has, with three or four other states, special and vital interests perhaps not duplicated elsewhere in global geography?

As a preliminary observation it may well be asked can all of these issues be embraced in a single, grand treaty (or series of treaties) linked together in time and concept? The answer to this question is that Santiago will do as much as it can but probably will not complete the task of including and resolving all of the issues in one great new charter for the oceans.

It is likely that two or three efforts will have to be made over the years to embrace in binding documents the multiple issues, in all of their complexity, and yet leave these instruments sufficiently openented so that they can take account of the changing technology in the swift decades ahead.

More important is to determine the type of approach

Drilling for ocean floor minerals that will serve Canadian as well as international interests in so challenging a venture—the creation of a comprehensive regime for the ocean space of the future. If is tempting to be assertive, simplistically, either on behalf of the primacy of a coastal state, or the supreme needs of the international community. Neither absolute will provide statesmanlike answers to this immense complex of debate and issues.

What Canada has done so far in partnership with like-minded states — and has done very well — is to develop some equilibrium between the notion of coastal authority and the claims of the international community. This approach, sometimes labeled "the functional" method, attempts to assess each particular problem in terms of what the situation requires for effective management or con-

In the case of fisheries the Canadian theory is the creature of scientific knowledge, the national interest and international involvement. For there is a growing body of opinion among marine biologists and oceanographers which points to the link between many species of "coastal" fish, often scores of miles out to sea, that owe their presence to the nutrients coming from the rivers and estuaries on the one hand, or upwelling from the continental shelf on the other. New information concerning the environment and the ecological chain affecting the food cycle, tend to confirm this link between fish and the shelf, and fish and coastal, land-provided nu-

For these reasons Canadian policy has been making claims to living resources which now tend to coincide with the concept of an "economic zone" or a "patrimonial sea" that runs seaward to 200 miles. These views are being supported by many Latin American and Afro-Asian states, with similar blaims by Australia and New Zealand. For Canada, however, the east-coast shelf-margin goes far beyond 200 miles and if we are to press the link between shelf-margin and living resources above the shelf we may have to make additional claims beyond what appears to be the emerging 200 mile economic zone compromise — with its accompanying and basic 12 mile territorial sea.

Share by Taxing

As for the continental shelf-margin itself Canadian policy has been to claim the total area up to the "margin" while offering, for the aid of developing countries, many without shelves, a self-taxation doctrine for "sharing" some of the revenues obtained from this large Canadian oceanic resource.

anic resource.

The pollution question both on the high seas off the coasts, in territorial waters or through straits, presents very difficult questions. Our 100-mile pollution control zones in the Arctic and the pollution zones on the east and west coasts have been criticized by some states for this unilateral attempt at coastal protection. But what should Canada have done in the absence of clear international rules or forecastable and effective machinery to do the job?

Fundamental to the whole debate will be the balancing of broad international rules and as yet little developed administrative machinery with coastal management based on reasonable domestic and international standards in the case of pollution; and some coastal preferences in the case of fish as a trade-off for the coastal state "managing" the fish stocks in the name-of-the international community.

Some wide-ranging species will need multi-national management. Here the coastal state's role may be determined by special regional treaties governing its function and its share of the quotas.

In the case of most fish, at the present rate, we may be only 20 years away from the time when the world catch may be reaching the point threatening the ability of the majority of edible species to survive. What shall be the methods for equitable sharing and for the intelligent conservation of the living resources of the sea thus becomes a central challenge at Santiago. Similarly, how shall we manage the shelves and the areas beyond in fairness both to the coastal states and to all mankind.

The ocean presents claims upon imagination for global answers to global problems, demanding a degree of wisdom that too narrow a national interest may not always be able to provide. Canadian leadership in search of this balance between the national and the international interest will have an opportunity to demonstrate Canadian maturity as much as in any trans-national activity undertaken by Canada in this half century.

Small Talk at the Summit

Our authoritative White House leak has just arrived with the secret record of President Nixon's secret talk with Premier Tanaka of Japan, which is reproduced here in the interest of refocusing public attention on the truly great world issues.

President Nixon asked Tanaka what was new.

Not much, replied Tanaka. He asked what was new with the President:

The President said he had some truly great world problems on his hands, which left him no time at all for wallowing in Watergate.

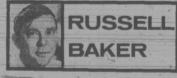

Tanaka said he had heard before leaving Tokyo that Nixon was not wallowing in Watergate. In fact he had mentioned it at a meeting of the Japanese cabinet, which had applauded the President's resolution to keep his eye on the great issues.

The President asked Tanaka what he thought about the trade that had brought Duane Thomas to the Washington Redskins.

While he was not prepared to comment/on specific deals, Tanaka replied, Japan was always happy to see completely uninhibited economic intercourse and hoped that the Duane Thomas deal indicated the Washington Redskins might now be ready to sell soy-beans to Japan.

beans to Japan.

Nixon asked Tanaka if there was anyone special to whom he would like to talk during his American visit, Tanaka said that, like everyone else, he was dying to talk to G. Gordon Liddy. The President replied that the Washington

Redskins were going to need every soybean they had this year,

In that case, Tanaka said, the President could forget all about the special showing of "Pattoh" starring George C. Scott which he had scheduled in the White House theatre that night, as he, Tanaka, would be much too busy trying to trade two sumo wrestlers to the Miami Dolphins for some soybeans.

Nixon said Tanaka would regret it.
"Patton" was a great movie. In fact, the President said he intended to go see it again whether Tanaka attended or not. The President asked whether Tanaka had some territory in Japan which needed to be bombed.

Tanaka expressed alarm and said he was sorry he had mentioned Liddy, soybeans and the Miami Dolphins, and had, in fact, only been kidding about not coming to see "Patton," which had been given four stars in the Asahi Shim-

Nixon explained that one of the great problems before him was where to bomb next after he ended the bombing of Cambodia in mid-August at the insistence of Congress. He had hoped Norway might volunteer to provide some target land in its sparsely populated porthern latitudes. Someone, however, had urged the Norwegians not to agree. There were suspicions that it was Daniel Ellsberg. Tanaka said American agents in Japan believed Ellsberg was behind the installation of Gen, Hideki Tojo as Premier of Japan in 1941 and was, therefore, directly responsible for the attack on Pearl Harbor.

The President said Japan was Jucky

The President said Japan was lucky it had lost the war. For the United States, he said, it had been nothing but bomb, bomb, bomb ever since we had knocked out Tojo and become Number One. And now for the first time in years there was going to be no place to bomb. How could he possibly explain it to the Air Force?

Tanaka asked why the United States did not bomb a large uninhabited tract of the Pacific Ocean as the French were doing at that very moment?

Nixon asked how Japanese public opinion would react to a prolonged carpet-bombing of Daniel Ellsberg.

Tanaka replied that this was strictly an internal American matter. And speaking of internal matters, he said, he wondered if the President could tell him where he might get a decent piece of beef in America without having to meet a beeflegger off the Maryland coast during the hours before dawn.

Nixon told Tanaka to quit wallowing in food consumption and concentrate on the great issues. Tanaka promised for try. Nixon said it was too bad Tanaka would not stay in America long enough to see Duane Thomas run out of the Redskins' backfield. Tanaka said good-

Nixon's Clamps Need Real Chance to Work

Washington Post Columnist WASHINGTON — Phase IV of the Nixon administration's wage-price controls will begin Sunday at 11:59 p.m. EDT, and if it is to have any chance of modest success, a certain presidential adviser must quit knocking its prospects before it gets off the ground.

It is only sensible to be realistic about Phase IV and accept the obvious fact that wage-price controls alone won't lick inflation, or affect prices in the supermarket.

But it is quite another matter to assure the public, as Economic Council chairman Herbert Stein did the other day, that the mirror image of controls is shortages, and to prepare for the worst.

Stein had better re-read the facts about economic performance during Phase III. Putting aside the 20.3 per cent rise in consumer food for the moment, the compelling fact is that all consumer prices rose at an annual rate of 8.3 per cent, compared with 3.6 per cent in Phase II. And wholesale industrial commodities soared 14.4 per cent, compared with 3.5 per cent in Phase II.

The obvious need to return to something like Phase II could be missed only by someone who refuses to acknowledge the disastrous nature of Phase III. And while Treasury Secretary George Shultz (no fan of controls) readily concedes that Phase III was a mistake, Stein insisted in recent testimony before the Joint Economic Committee that abandonment of Phase II had "little direct effect on accelerating the infla-

Phase IV, as former pay-board member Arnold Weber says, is a necessary return to the "rigors" of Phase II, with most sectors of the economy subject to mandatory con-

The big firms must once again give 30 days advance notice before putting price in-creases into effect, and generally speaking, price jumps will be allowed only to cover the actual amount of cost in-creases, without the normal percentage mark-up. On the wage side, 5.5 per cent plus 0.7 per cent for benefits is still the standard, with some room for flexibility under the guidance of Cost of Living Director

What can Phase IV do? With the fiscal 1974 budget about in balance and monetary policy getting tighter, Weber says, it can have "a salutory effect on the expectations that often sustain inflation.

In other words, it will dampen the natural inclination of unions to demand larger wage increases, and of businessmen to sneak in yet another protective price boost.

"By imposing a tough set of solve to deal forthrightly with inflation through the whole array of economic mea-sures."

There is yet another func-tion that Phase IV can perform, and that is the limitation of discretionary power of unions and big companies in the market place.

When Herb Stein talks about the "costs" of controls, he is implying that an uncontrolled society is free of distortions and always in a good balance; or at a minimum, that the discourage are less in that the distortions are less in in a controlled one.

But this ignores, as Weber points out, the leverage that can be exerted by big labor-and big industry "during a period of high demand, which presently characterizes the economy. Thus, controls can block the petroleum companies—or the teamsters union—from exploiting short-term advantages in the

If Galbraith comes on too strong to suit Stein, he might observe that other distinguished economists, ranging in philosophy from John Blair to Arthur Burns, back up Weber's suggestion.

So as Phase IV starts, let's give it a chance to work, hopefully with a more sensitive touch than we witnessed during Phase III. Shultz and Dunlop have promised to be selective, which is good. The policy of agricultural scarcity has been belatedly abandoned, which is good. What is needed now is some cheering, rather

Tax Penalty Fines No Business Expense

A recent bulletin from the department of national revenue served as a reminder that the job of tax law modernization is never done. In fact, the search-and-find operation to detect the inequities and anomalies in the system would make a full-time job for an army of trained observers, particularly as the new tax system becomes more operative.

The recent announcement that the revenue department intends to continue its practice of refusing to allow taxpayers to deduct the fines and penalties they pay in the course of earning their income, brings the departmental policy into question.

By and large the courts have supported the govern-ment in its view that it would be contrary to good public policy to allow fines and penalties to be classified as busi-ness expenses. That, it is ar-gued, would bestow a public acceptance of or respectability for law breaking.

The principle is correct when considered in isolation from the realities of the modern world: surely it would thwart elementary justice if a convicted embezzler were allowed to soften the impact of his fine by being able to deduct it from his income and thus reduce his tax! Or would

The law allows one to deduct all expenses or outlays necessarily and reasonably incurred in earning one's income. The government view is that it is neither necessary nor reasonable to have to break the law and suffer fines in order to earn one's income and therefore those fines can't be classified as a legitimate cost of doing business.

That might be acceptable if it weren't for the fact that the government taxes the income earned by law-breaking. Thus it seems, reasonable that all the costs, including fines, actually suffered in the course of deductible.

The revenue department's double standard eventually be-comes a triple standard. For example, a prostitute earns il-legal income and pays full tax. If she's caught and pays a fine, the fine isn't deductible. But, more inexplicable, if she pays off the arresting of-ficer to avoid the conviction and fine, that's a deductible expense of doing business.

In less exotic terms, it is the same with a company which spends considerable sums in working out a com-bine or monopoly to lessen competition in its product. The expense of committing the crime is deductible business expense, the profits earned from the breach of the law are taxable, but the fine levied by a court for the of-fence isn't deductible from that income

A further incongruity arises from the fact that two individual offenders, equally guilty of the same offence, can face the same penalty but wind up with completely different treatment before the law.

Take two taxi drivers incolved in the same traffic ac-cident, both earning $1,000 per month. They are convicted of the same offence and sen-tenced to a fine of $1,000 or a on e-month suspension of their licence. Smith works for a big company and is afraid he'll lose his job if he goes off the road. He pays the fine.

It isn't deductible. Assume his top tax bracket is 40 per cent. At the end of the year he's had $11,000 of take-home pay after the fine, but is taxed on the full $12,000. The extra cost to him is $400 over and above the fine.

Jones, the other taxi driver, is part of a small consortium of driver-owners and he deyear, he'll have the same take-home earnings as Smith but will have paid $400 less in. tax and had a one-month holi-day to boot — and basically, compliments of the tax sys-

The same tax anomaly exists in the case of a professional person who is found guilty of professional misconduct by the disciplinary computer that the control of the case o mittee of his professional society. If he's suspended from practice for a period, he'll lose income on which he would have otherwise paid tax; if he's fined, he'll con-tinue to carn taxable income in order to pay the non-deduc-tible fine.

of refusing deductibility of fines, particularly when they are suffered through accidental or unintentional commission of an offence. The trucker whose shipper has overloaded his vehicle pays a non-deductible over-weight highway fine; the business executive who overparks at a meter during a business meeting is in the same boat, as is the union member who refuses to honor a sympathy strike, crosses a picket line to earn taxable income, but suffers a non-deductible fine from his union.

The tax law should be amended in the name of equality. Failing that, the courts and all organizations capable of levying fines on their members should, in setting the amount of the fines, take into account that the tax treatment of it has the effect of merely doubling its financial effect.

"FOR SALE PRIVATELY" BARGAIN!!

- Really? For whom??

Why would a vendor deviate from his own occupational environment to attempt to sell real estate; deal with multitudes of unscreened "potential" purchasers (Repeatedly justifying the asking price-maybe even argung. Risking a lost sale by misunderstanding, impatience or lack of necessary tools. I.E. Comparative sales, knowledge in up-to-date mortgaging and finance, etc., etc., and then sell under market value? Hardly—Common sense would point out the positive value of a professional realtor.

Why then would a purchaser pay top market price for real estate privately—without the benefit of being sure he is buying the most suitable property with the least risk; with the best available finance; without the frustrating loss of time trying to arrange details, etc. Very simply, he probably wouldn't—he would seek the services of an experienced, professional realtor.

Ask any realtor who has been engaged in sales a reasonable length of time and I'm sure they have experienced "Mr. Jones" who purchased "Mr. Brown's" home as soon as it was put in the hands of a realtor, although "Mr. Jones" had been aware for some time that ("Mr. Brown" had his property for sale privately for some time, but "Mr. Jones" simply did not wish to deal directly.

I have encountered most every imaginable situation involving real estate over the last eight years and have successfully dealt with seemingly impossible situations. I shall be returning from holidays this weekend (Friday, August 10) free of any listings or obligations and would be pleased to discuss any aspect of real estate at your convenience with absolutely no obligation.

Introducing a group insurance plan.

For very small groups.

There's no reason why a small business can't give the employee protection usually associated with big business

That's why we have a big benefit plan for companies who's manpower ranges from just two to ten people.

It's good for the employer because it decreases turnover. And it's good for the employee because he feels protected by his company. Moreover the plan is surprisingly inexpensive and flexible. Call me.

More to Games Than Winning Medals

By BILL WALKER Times Sports Columnist

BURNABY - So what are the Canada Summer Games all about if you aren't one of the Big Three' as the surprisingly successful event winds down to its conclusion on Sun-

If the 'Big Three' are B.C., Ontario and Quebec, in what ever order, that is the battle for medals. But what about the others, the Territory of the Yukon? It is a cog in the wheel, and the youngsters there, in a land of only 20,000 souls, have just as much right to compete, and enjoy themselves in competition, as anyone else.

Theirs isn't a medal fight; theirs isn't a battle for supremacy across the nation; theirs is for the fun and pride of competition and what, generally speaking, is the concept of the Summer Games.

Russ Graham, a member of the Yukon Territory, said it simply:

"We knew when we came we wouldn't win a medal, but what we wanted only to see Yukoners competing to their best of their ability.

"Sure, we haven't won anything, but we've got a lot of happy kids here. They are seeing new territory, and they are seeing a lot of things they aren't going to see in the Yukon." Then he laughted: 'After all, we did beat Prince Edward Island in shooting So there was a moral triumph, but before it the prob-

"The shooters didn't get their guns until two weeks before they came here. They didn't have a chance to practice and they also had to shell out $700 each to pay for them.'

Otherwise, and feel for the Yukon:

In Soccer: "We never did score a goal," said Graham. "We lost 9-0. 19-0, 7-0, but then this is purely a recreational school program and purely minimal. A little practice in the spring, May is the earliest we can get on the field, and the kids do the best they can."

In tennis: "Oh, we didn't win any sets, but the players did win some games. There are only two courts. They're side by side, at Whitehorse. We asked for players by advertising and we got seven replies. One was ineligible, so the team of six was picked from what was left. Some were transplants Sandy Kearns, is a Scotsman but our doubles team of George Grant and Brian Grisley-Jones are both Yukoners."

In softball: "We don't have the pitching; the team is very young; we can't get on the field at home until May; there is no good competition, and we lost — to New Brunswick, 27-0, Saskatchewan 24-1, B.C. 33-0, and Newfoundland 21-4. How about that - four runs against Newfoundland.

"Some of the kids are only 13 and 14."

In swimming, "We've only got one 35-yard pool. It isn't heated and went indoors for the first time this year. The Nested and went indoors for the first time this year. The Yukon Swimming Association, which operates out of the Whitehorse Club, only has 44 members in all.

"Still, do you know that every swimmer we brought here bettered his or her best time? We have to proud and happy

Then he added: "You know when you get down to the top 10 of each, boys and girls, you also get down to our 11-year-old Gordie Reid. He surely was going around here with big eyes — all the attention he was getting."

In track and field: "That's yet to come, it's mainly a school sport at home. Our best high jumper, Warren Scheeler, can do 6'2". So we'll see."

So it's fun to lose?

"I think our athletes have done as well as we could expect. All we want to see is improvement, and we have seen that. Most performances have been better."

But money? It appeared to be another slight headache for

"We know we have a lot of work to do," said Graham."Even through the government, and work there.

"Do you know what our entire Canada Games budget was?" he asked rhetorically. "It was $7,000 for 83 athletes, 98 overall in the party. We got only $3,300 from our government. The Northwest Territories (population 30,000, 10,000 more than the Yukon) got $46,000 and they sent about the same number of people as we did. And we might even beat 'em.''

One more comparison.
"Some of the teams here had about twice as much spent on them for their walking out dress alone as our entire bud-

Vicettes Win Another, B.C. Grabs Track Golds

Victoria Vicettes went five for five in the women's softball couver Islanders helped B.C. pick up most of the early track and field gold medals Friday in the Canada Summer Games. Two Vancouver players picked up by manager Wally Yeamans to strengthen his B.C. team — Debbie Ross, who turned 16 just this week, and Wendy Steeves - shone as B.C. swept the opening round-robin series by beating stubborn Newfoundland team 6-3 in nine innings.

choice and if she got off to a rocky start allowing two hits and one run in the first intim of an unearned run in the second, she didn't panic. Rather she streadied, and was quite impressive. Only one other, Newfoundland runner reached third base from the second inning to the ninth when the Easterners scored their final run. By then it was too late, Vicettes having scored four to break that 2-2 deadlock in a pressure-packed contest, possibly one of the most exciting of the championship.

It was Ross's second win, Rosemary Fuller having won the other three games, and it was fine pitching duel too, between Ross and Patty Polych Polych blanked the Vicettes for six innings, getting out of a serious jam in th second in-ning when she speared a line drive off the bat of Ross with the bases loaded and one out and then striking out Susan Metcalfe to end the threat. She was superb then until the seventh when disaster struck.

A wild pitch by Polych and Steeves lit out for home, on her own, she admitted, and if Vicettes needed one break this day, this was it. Catcher Peggy Baker of New-foundland, playing with a broken blood vessel in her catching hand and a heavily bandaged leg from a muscle pull, snagged the loose ball and actually tagged out Steeves, only to drop the ball.

The run counted then Rosemary Fuller, playing centre

dle to score Ross and the game was in extra innings.

Enter another hero, Diane Whittingham. In the ninth she stroked a two run single, to put Vicettes ahead for the first time. Jan Crook singled to score Fuller and Whit-tingham for the insurance markers.

Today, Vicettes were matched against Ontario in the semis. If successful they will be in the finals tonight

Bev Cox of Victoria and Jo Ann Calverley of Nanaimo were among the winners as Joao Soares reckons he has tiebreakers all figured out and is he glad about it!

The young Brazilian tennis tar left the Racquet Club-ourts Friday, exhausted after an amazing match, and sighed with relief.

the top-seeded Soares held the edge in two of three tie-breakers to snatch a thrilling 7-6, 6-7, 7-6 win from Dan Courson of Texas.

That put the 22-year-old Brazilian in today's men's singles final in the B.C. Open tennis tournament.

Both the calm, workmanlike Soares and the stylish Courson, 20, sent over well-placed cannonball serves and pep-pered the court with finelyangled volleys as they treated the crowd to two and-a-half hours of by far the best tennis of the week-long tourney.

Giant-killer Billy Hoover, who earlier in the week top-pled second-seeded Dave Bryant, upset fourth-seeded Chris Kachell 3-6, 6-3, 6-4 in

And "upset" was just the word for what Hoover, with his mixture of fine returns and what veteran showman Bobby Riggs would call "junk shots" did to Kachell, promising second-ranked junior in Australia. Employing a big flat serve and classic strokes in the John Newcombe mould, Ka-chell dominated the early games but began to over-hit when his tenacious opponent

Park Pop Fizzles

By BRYAN HAY Times Staff

There was magic in the air at Beacon Hill Park last Sat-urday in an afternoon that ended with a slam.

Once again, too bad there were so few people around to enjoy the thing.

I'm beginning to think the idea of pop concerts in the park may not be such a good after all. It's a bummer for the performers to look out of the bandshell at all that space which could be occupied by people; it's a hassle for the promoters, police and politicians who have to put up with complaints from elderly residents of park-front apart-ments; and it's a frustration for the folk who are there because there aren't enough of them to really get it on.

And a great pity. Because the concerts are a great showcase for local bands, some of which have shown themselves to be surprisingly good.

Take last Saturday afternoon.

The groups gigged — and a more dissimilar couple of hours entertainment it would. be hard to imagine . . . ranging from whimsical folk to hard, grinding rock.

Each group, too, was aptly-named: Magic and Slam. Wanderers downtown may have seen the trio who make up Magic, two guitarists and a flautist, playing on Broad Street mall.

(They play far better in a street situation than they do on-stage.)

Which is understandable considering the short period of time they have been together and the months it takes to build up a stage rapport among the members of a group so they instinctively slide from one number to another automatically gauging the feel of the audience and their own particular mood.

Despite their current foundering stage presence, it's hard to fault Magic musically; given a few more months together, they could turn into a really tight folk group. The other group, Slam, laid down close to an hour of heavy gut rock — solid but unoriginal. However, if you can't hear Jagger and Richards in person, you might as well get into a group that can get it on just as well, which lead guitarist Mark Stadnick and vocalist Jack Day manage very nicely.

However, it looks as though there won't be a scheduled third concert in the park, according to promoter Dave Ringland. Just too many hassles and complaints.

"The great tragedy is that the city was finally with us,' Ringland told me Friday 'And (parks director) Cliff Bates was just tremendous."
Incidentally, a sound reading was taken near the handshell last Saturday, and the reading came out on a level with the normal sound of

Douglas Street traffic. "But," Ringland added, "people could distinguish the sound — they knew it was rock music — so they beefed. "It's funny, we've fought for so many years to get rock concerts at Beacon Hill . . . now it hardly seems worth

Instead of the windup concert at Beacon Hill, he said, plans are now being formulat-ed for a mini-festival at Mount Doug nearer to Labor Day "where we can really put everything in shape.

The Girl in the Band Is More Than a Token

NEW YORK - When tenor saxophonist Mary Fettig sleeps on the Stan Kenton bus, she seems to be a pixie-ish 4 feet 6 inches. Curled up in her seat, with a blanket wrapped around her hair and eyes, she is a little feminine bundle that goes almost unno-

But when Miss Fettig stands up in front of the Stan Kenton Orchestra, she is a re-alistic 5 feet 6, she is very much the centre of attention, and she plays the horn, as Kenton (but hardly Gloria Steinem) puts it, "like a

The 20-year-old Miss Fettig is the latest addition to the Kenton jazz band and the first woman in any of the 61-yearold leader's many bands.

Music industry sources say she is the only woman member of a big name jazz band today and one of only a very few since Mary Lou Williams played piano for Andy Kirk in the mid-1930's.

In fact, despite the current women's liberation efforts, no woman has played regularly with a big name jazz orchestra since the Woody Herman and Dizzy Gillespie bands of the 40's, several industry sources said.

Miss Fettig, a native of Concord, Calif., played her first "gig" with the Kenton band on June 18 after complethe University of California at Los Angeles. (Right now, she has no plans to return to school.) She has quickly settled into the every-night-in-a-city, 200-miles-a-day-by-bus, never-get-enough-sleep strong impressions.

She has also formed some strong impressions.

As a starter, playing in the Kenton band is all she wants to do. "It's this music," she explained. "And it's, the warmth of Stan. You can see it in everyone. It's just like a big family-type feeling."

But hasn't she missed cooking, jogging, pajuiting or any-ing, jogging, painting or anything? "Well I like to read, but really, I just like to play."

And she likes to play for young people. "The high school concerts are more exeiting than the night clubs be-cause the kids are there," she said. "They really come to hear what we're doing. At the nightclubs the people come because, 'wow,' it's Stan Kenton, and he was great when I was a kid.' And a lot of them are drunk and slobbering."

Besides slobbering adults,

Miss Fettig has another peeve: "Right-on women's libbers. They kind of turn me off. They're just so strong. They just go on and on with that. They start clapping the minute I walk up there (to the microphone). It doesn't matter what I play."
"Some of them have come up to me and said, 'You shouldn't stand for that. You shouldn't let them baby you like that.' But I don't mind if one of the boys carries my in-strument to the bus. One of them (feminists) even got angry at Stan for some remark he made about me, I don't even remember what it but he jokes about ev-

Most of the Kenton musicians come recommended personally as well as musical-- by someone else in the band, so there is not much more discord on the bus than on the bandstand. Drugs are not tolerated, and there is little drinking except on a late night trip after an engageerybody.

The bus carries Kenton; 18 other musicians, generally ranging in age from 18 to 40, with most in their 20's; manager (male); an aide (female) to the Kenton organization, Creative World, Inc., of Los Angeles; and usually one or two girl friends spending a week or so with a

The 120-pound Miss Fettig, who has long brown hair and blue eyes that often turn to green, wears blue jeans and sneakers on the bus. On the bandstand, she wears a long, sleeveless, low-cut black gown, with no lipstick and no fingernail polish.

She was asked to join the Kenton band because the boss

Mini-Millions Money-M

NEW YORK (CP) — Most major Hollywood film studios are again turning a profit, mainly by producing selective. films costing no more than $2 million each.

The Godfather, which cost Paramount $6 million, is one of the exceptions. It is ex-pected to bring in $120 million at the box office.

The turnaround in Hollywood's financial fortunes is due to a "new breed of bright businessmen" who run the show, says Business week.

In a survey of the movie industry, the weekly business magazine says eight major film companies last year earned profits totalling $168

This compares with the red-ink days of 1969 and 1970, when losses were more than $300 million. When the musical Sound of Music starring Julie Andrews, was produced for $7.6 million by Twentieth Century Fox in 1966 and earned $72 million in U.S. rentals alone, studios went on a spending spree, hoping for a big hit like it. Business Week quotes Daniel Melnick, MGM's vice-president for production, as saying: "Everybody acted as there were some god of the movies who would periodically come down and save people from their folies by giving them a hig hit?" giving them a big hit."

any more who was first to reach the North Pole — Frederick A. Cook or Robert E Peary? I certainly didn't be fore I read these two books.

Nor did I care much more about the controversy after reading Dennis Rawlins book - an attempt to dismiss both Cook's and Peary's accomplishments, as well as Byrd's claim tohave been the first to fly over the pole, and to assign credit "discovering" the pole to the great Norwegian Roald Amundsen. For Rawlins, a physicist and astronomer, seems almost exclusively con cerned with the question of 'firsts' and offers little of li erary or dramatic interest to embellish his "case" against Peary. (Doubtless, Rawlins would have created a sensation had he published his book 40 years ago.)

But Hugh Eames' "Winne Lose All" proved another Lose All" proved another matter entirely. By the time I finished reading this charm ing and literate account, I not only understood why the world once cared so much about the controversy, but I was quite prepared to jump into it myself, For Eames has skilfully recreated the atmosphere of the early 20th century, when discovering the North Pole seemed as important as reaching the moon did to a later age.

And he has drawn a complex and sympathetic portrait who snatched one of the cenury's most humiliating defeats from the jaws of its most prestigious victory. and built a compelling case for Cook's claims as well.

Eames believes that when Frederick A. Cook cabled The New York Herald on Sept. 1, 1909, announced that he had 'reached North Pole April 21, - thereby apparently beating out his arch-rival Peary - he was not the liar that posterity has dismissed him as being. The trouble was, Eames contends, Cool was miscast in his role: He had a naive, overtrusting character that was no match him. And in Peary he faced a rival of stupendous arrogance and ambition who had staked everything (including eight of his toes) on being first to the pole; while in Peary's backers and supporters - the Peary Arctic Club and its millionaire members, the National Geographic Society, and The New York Times — Cook was challenging nothing less than America's oligarchical establishment (No. "Winner Lose Ali" isn't an ideologue's book; Eames simply believes that powerful people accustomed to winning will go to almostany lengths not to lose). So eventually, thanks to devious any lengths not to lose). So eventually, thanks to devious plots, lucrative bribes, a well-timed campaign of harassment, plus a few painful blunders of his own, Cook was reduced from hero to hoaxer, and Peary was declared the winner and American hero. can hero.

amount of advocacy in the way Eames constructs his case. For instance, he paints an obnoxious portrait of Peary, whereas Cook is all bumble and good faith.

And a good deal of clever dramatic timing goes into Eames' case for Cook. So, as persuasive as it is, one would be bound to read much more Eames' verdict as final. But it finally doesn't matter

On their few square miles of island they now have a few modern amenities: a small electric plant, a few motor-bikes, plenty of radios, a few gas refrigerators, many handwound gramophones. The chief source of "government" revenue comes from Pitcairn stamps which are printed in Britain. Private revenue comes chiefly from sale of their carvings and other handicrafts to passengers and crews of ships that infrequently wallow offshore in the giant swells as briefly as possible.

What of the future of this tiny island where the women win the annual tug-of-war and the arrival of new babies is as infrequent as it is much hoped for? There is a steady drain of population, especially to New Zealand. Many believe that is where they will all end up. But twice in their history the colony has moved to other South Sea locations and twice they have returned to their two-miles by one-mile, forbid-ding "mountain top" in the lonely waste of the South Pa-cific. It's an interesting idea to bring together the work of new and established poets but I think it's hard on the new ones. Which has nothing to do with age. Susan Musgrave's "Song for an Unborn Bear" is taut, well-written and stands up well beside the sophistica-tion of P. K. Page, the

PETER MURRAY-EDITOR

By WILLIAM FRENCH

The story of how Allen Lane started Penguin Books and thus launched the paperback revolution is almost too pat to be credible. But it illustrates again the truism that great ideas often have deceptively simple origins. As Sir William Emrys Williams relates the story in his memoir of his old friend, Lane lish countryside in 1934. As he tha Christie to return to London, he browsed in a bookstall for something to read on the journey. There was nothing on the shelves but expensive hardcovers and garish rubbish. Surely, he thought, there should be a place for good literature at a modest price.

Lane, then 31, was already an established publisher, as chairman of The Bodley Head. During the next few months mulled over the idea of a cheap paperback reprint series, soliciting advice and opinions. Much of the reaction was negative, even in his own firm. Old Guard publishers were scornful, and pre-dicted people wouldn't buy cheap editions at sixpence Booksellers were suspicious fearing that if the public did buy paperbacks, they'd ignore the more expensive hardcover

What happened, of course, is now a major chapter in the cultural history of the twen-tieth century. From modest beginnings, Penguin became a multi-million-dollar empire and revolutionized reading habits. The idea was widely emulated and paperbacks be-came a powerful force in mass education. Long before his death in 1970, Sir Allen Lane was recognized as one of the most significant inno-vators of our times. And to vators of our times. And to think that somebody might have offered to drive him back to London after that country weekend.

The first 10 Penguins were published in July, 1935. Lane's concept of the series was limited to the idea of reprints, mostly fiction, and the first titles reflected that view; they included two detective they included two detective thrillers by Agatha Christie and Dorothy Sayers, novels by Compton Mackenzie and Eric Linklater, Ernest Hemingway's A Farewell To Arms and Ariel, a life of Shelley by Andrew Mayerie

Andrew Maurois.

The venture got off to a shaky start, and orders were slow in coming. The Times Literary Supplement saw no future for sixpenny paper-backs and wrote them off in point came when Lane went to Woolworth's and persuaded the head buyer to order 100,-000 copies—10,000 of each of 000 copies—10,000 of each of the 10 titles. A further order from Woolworth's came within a week, and other booksellers began to take notice. So did the public, and the revolution was truly launched.

Sir William Emrys Williams met Lane about this time and Lane, as was his habit, questioned him closely about Pen-guins. Williams, who later became chairman of the British Arts Council, was then deeply involved in adult education, and suggested a series of original paperbacks on cultural and intellectual subjects. Out of that suggestion came the Pelican series in 1937, and the beginning of a long and close friendship between the two men. Williams claims immodestly — and probably correctly — that the Penguin firm could not have achieved its success on popular reprints alone, and that the launching of Pelicans, which opened up the huge educational market, was the most decisive step in the firm's history.

The business relationship between Lane and Williams became chief editor and ultimately a director, and was one of the four members of the so-called high command which set editorial policy. Yet he was never actually on the staff, and never received a salary. His main contribution seems to have been made at 20 years at the same Spanish the major decisions were taken, in conjunction with lots of Spanish wine. In any event, Williams is eminently qualified to write both about Penguins and Sir Allen Lane. His book is neither a history of the company nor a biography of its foun-der, although there are ele-ments of both. All he intended was some personal reminis-cences of the early days, and he succeeds in that limited

But there are many gaps in fact that a full biography should be written. There is no attempt, for example, to assess how the invention of Penguins influenced the later development of American paperbacks. We don't even learn how the name happened to

Yet, given the length of William's profile, it's surprising how much he is able to take the measure of his man. He doesn't flinch from the less attractive aspects of Lane's character, and at times he leaves you wondering which side he's on. Some of the adjectives he used to describe Lane include volatile. insecure, capricious, unreliable, impish, genially malicious, wily, opportunist, unscrupulous. He says Lane was a moral coward and had a streak of sadism. But he gives the other side of the picture too, stressing his generosity, his innovative flair, his genial companionship. He gives him full credit for forc-ing the issue of Lady's Chatterley's Lover in 1960 Penguin was tried on obscenity charges and won. For a man who had phenomenal influence on our culture, Lane was a curious paradox. He did little to educate himself after he left school at 16, read few books and had little interest in the arts in general. Williams makes an apt summation of his accomplishments, borrowing the inscription on the tomb of Sir Christopher Wren in St. Paul's Cathedral: "If you seek his monument — look around you."

SILENT FRANK COCH-RANE, by Scott and Astrid Young. Macmillan. $7.95.

The record makes Social

Credit's 20 years in power in British Columbia seem a modest achievement. Starting in 1905, when Frank Cochrane, the subject of this book, became a recognized factor in politics, the Conservatives held power until 1919 when the United Farmers took over for four years. The Conserva-tives were back from 1923 to 1934 and then the Liberals reigned for nine years.

Since 1943 the Conservatives have ruled without interrup-tion. For 55 of the last 68 years they have been the choice of Ontario.

The Sudbury hardware merchant, Frank Cochrane (1852-1919), served as a minster in the provincial legislature and later in the Boyden cabinet in Ottawa. He had abilities in organization which won him respect but; for a politician, he was notably con-eise in speech-making. The Youngs, gathering information for this book, searched in vain for bursts of eloquence or dramatic incidents. Even when Cochrane fell when leaving a train and had a leg amputated he made it appear no great event; he bought a cork leg and carried on as usual.

R. B. Bennett, who was to a prime minister 11 years fter Cochrane died, described him as "a great silent man with a vision of the fu-ture of Canada which he cannot express." This remark is revealing. Bennett himself was an eloquent and stirring speaker in the House of Com-mons but Ontario has not required, and may in fact suspect, orators. George Drew, Leslie Frost or John Robarts, to mention three recent pre-

He loved to arrange expeditions of members of the legislature and of Parliament to view mines, roads and rail-ways. As a federal minister he inspected the route of the Hudson Bay Railway and did his share — and more — in paddling the canoe that took his party to Port Nelson on Hudson Bay.

People admired such energy and down-to-earth meth-ods. In Ontario he bravely tackled the job of modernizing, and making more effective mining regulations. Certain supporters of his party were displeased when taxes were applied and the new rules appeared to restrict their free-dom of action in mining promotions but Cochrane brought them around. In Ottawa his started to bring order and efficiency into the tangled mess of railways on which so much been lavished. Apart from the practical approach, Cochrane had another asset required of the success ful Ontario Conservative politician. He said once that an Ontario government knew no politics "except for a couple of months every four years." The Tories did indeed stop the dismissals of Ontario civil servants that once marked a change of government. Men such as Cochrane did not fail to see that the people who supported them were given a break, when that was possible, but they did little firing without cause, a common "cause" being outspoken support of Liberal candidates who lost.

Cochrane is almost a forgot ten man. As the Youngs remark, few politicians below the rank of prime minister have a place in history. But, for a man of whom so little is known apart from his political activity, he makes an inter-esting study in how to succeed

Orson Welles Signs Up For TV Mystery Series

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON - Orson Welles, the legendary, brooding talent of stage, radio and cinema, has consistently spurned all attempts to lure him into a television series, but now the coup has been accomplished by one of Britain's smallest commercial TV companies.

"I have been getting offers ever since television began," the hulking, 58-year-old Welles said recently in London. "But I've always refused them because I thought the material would be rubbish."

The man who wrote, produced, directed and starred in Citizen Kane, judged by many film buffs the greatest movie ever made, has signed up with tiny Anglia Television of of half hour suspense stories called Great Mysteries. It has already been sold to CBS Television and the first 13 stories will be screened in Britain and the U.S. this Welles will take the key linking role of The Storyteller in these special television adaptations of classic chillers by British, French and American authors from the 19th century to the present. He also will act in one of the plays and "I have accepted this," said Welles, "because they seemed sure to have real quality, a chance of doing something you wouldn't be ashamed of."

The tales of mystery range in time from Honore de Bal-

A series of four consecutive sunset ceremonies will be performed by cadets from Esqui-malt Sea Cadet Camp next week on the lawns of the Legislative Buildings.

Next Week

More than 250 cadets attending the camp will be involved in the precision drill on the evenings of Aug. 15, 16, 17, 2014 17 and 18.

Cadets will muster Wharf Street at about 7:40 p.m. march down Government to Belleville and then turn on to the Legislative Building lawns. Return will be by the same route.

The first ceremony on Wednesday evening will see an inspection by Rear Admi-ral R. John Pickford, Com-mander Maritime Forces, Pacific. It is hoped that Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen will be an inspecting officer on one of the succeeding evenings.

Passing-out parade will be held at Esquimalt camp on Aug. 18. Inspecting officer on that occasion will be Rear Ad-miral Robert St. J. Stephen, Commander Training Command (Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Northern

Burns Lake Timber Harvest Bids Sought by Government

The provincial government Co. Ltd., now Canadian Celluwill soon ask for bids from 'le private industry groups interested in developing timber available to the winner of the harvesting facilities in the Burns Lake area as part of an industrial development plan for the northwestern sector of the province. Announcement of the bid opportunities came Friday from Resources Minister Robert Williams, who described the move as the fourth step in a series which was initiated with the government's acqui-sition of the forestry operations of Columbia Cellulose

The annual timber harvest competition for the government licence is 180,000 cunits. (A cunit is 100 cubit feet of solid wood.)

Williams said the selection of the private company or companies to harvest the timber will be made on the basis of competitive cash bonus payments to the government above normal stumpage rates charged forest

For centuries these people have been credited with Devil worship, the practice of black magic, of venerating the sun and moon and paying special respect to the earth itself. Hence the warning not to spit which could lock me up in a magic circle. That the Yezidis themselves believe in magic circles is reflected in the wellknown story of a quick-witted policeman giving chase to two Yezidis. Having caught one he quickly drew a circle round him leaving him rooted to the ground while he went off after the second man.

Generally, the Yezidis are physically indistinguishable from the Kurds among whom they live and whose language they speak. The Turks often refer to them as bearded Kurds" or the "eight-whiskered ones" in reference to their fine beards and mousness of their eyebrows. Exact figures are impossi-ble to obtain, but it is estimated that there are something like 60,000 Yezidis scattered between Aleppo in Syria Mosul in Iraq, south-eastern Turkey, northwestern Iran and into the Caucasus. In Turkey, there are 10 villages in the hills around the little town ly by Yezidis. BACKLIGHTING

Few pictures have more impact than a dramatic backlight shot. The next time you are about to take a flower picture move around and put the sun behind the flower. With an adjustable camera, meter up close for the flower alone; with a fixed automatic make sure the flower fills most of the viewfinder. For striking portraits put the sun behind the subject then add fill-in flash to light the face. The most popular backlit subject has to be the sunset—and it's easier to photograph than you think. But don't try it unless you can look into the sunset without squinting, then just take a direct meter reading or leave your camera on "automatic" and shoot.

Loungewear for fall is frankly fluffy.

You'll never need to scour a pan again!

It isn't the actual dishwashing that gets us down it's having to mess around with dirty pans ... soaking and scraping and scouring to get them looking half-way decent? .. Even tefion has proved a disappointment in the past because the finish soon wears off ... But last week we discovered some amazing new no-stick-cookware at the Wooden Spoon .. Made in France, it's called T-Fal ... Comes in everything from omelette pans to a practical size 10"x14" roaster ... A nice clean-looking seal is impregnated right into the pan, not just coated on, so it will last the lifetime of the pan ... and nothing will ever stick to it! ... Can you imagine frying chicken and then just rinsing the pan? That's what we did last night! ... Same thing when you cook macaroni and cheese or other foods which normally stick like glue to the pans they're cooked in ... Not only does the food not stick, but the T-Fal pans themselves need simply be washed and rinsed to look clean and shining ... Weight watchers should especially welcome "T-Fal frying pans ... because no fat is needed ... So you can have your fried eggs or whatever and lose weight too! ... The girls at the Wooden Spoon, like all good cooks, are doing something good with "left-overs" ... Their idea is to serve you all sorts of goodies at a supersaving price in their "Left-Over Corner" ... Don't miss it! ... The Wooden Spoon, Midtown Mall, 720A Yiew St., 384-8823.

Nowadays, with so many people moving to apartments or smaller homes...providing comfortable accommodation for overnight guests can be a bit of a problem!...Maybe you only have one bedroom...or if you do have two you'd like that second one for a cozy den for you and your husband to relax in... So what do you do when family or friends show up for a visit? Simple! Just acquire one of the very handsome and extremely comfortable sofa beds we saw at Standard Furniture this week... As usual with Standard, they have a selection of hide-a-beds which will knock your eye out!... These fill practically a whole floor of the store, in fact... and you'll find every size... every style... every conceivable type of fabric... Whether it's contemporary, traditional, transitional or colonial which would best fit in with your furniture... Standard has it!... You know, in the past, many people thought sofa beds were miserable sorts of things... ungainly, hard and uncomfortable to sit on... and only to be slept on in cases of direst emergency!... Not so today, however... They're now designed to look good in any room... with latest styling and decorator colors... with refined cushion construction and springs so you get excellent seating comfort... beds guaranteed to make you sleep like a baby... You can make more use of the rooms you have by the addition of a hide-a-bed... Put one in your living room or den... You won't be able to tell it from a regular chesterfield!... Suits for fall smartness

Got a peek at the first fall suits to arrive at Charmante's when we were in last Monday... Just unpacked, as it happeneed, and not yet price-tagged... The Auckie Sanft two-piece suits with their unconstructed tailoring and chie styling struck us as being perfect for fall and winter... One style in grey flannel has a wrap-around jacket and tie belt... There's a teal blue suit with a very pretty collar and nice detailing... A few suits from other manufacturers too... Versatile camelhairs with wide-collared, double-breasted jackets and slight A-line skirts... Some lovely tweeds... one in greige with a natural opossum collar and brown leather belt. We always think fur collars look so smart on fall suits!... Other new arrivals are some pretty shawls and stoles... Lacey fringed shawls from Portugal... in ofange, turquoise, purple, black and white... Gossamer sheer gold and silver shawls for evening wear... Hand-woven shawls from Finland... Shawls are so very popular this year that you'll certainly want at least one!... We also like the dark green acrylic knit co-ordinates with the look of wool... Pleated skirts, slacks, sleeveless jumper tops... and printed polyester blouses to wear with them... Charmante's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 385-1643.

DEAR ABBY: For 20 years my employer, his wife, and L. have been good friends. Mine has always been one of those "dreamy" jobs. I ran the office, had everything my way and the new was great and the pay was great.

Recently we added a young divorcee to our staff and it's apparent that she and my boss are carrying on an afair. This girl has him wrapped around her little linger and he is walking around in a daze. His wife is suspicious. She calls and asks me all sorts of questions. Of course I cover up for him, but it is making a wreck of me. I can't keep my lies straight and I am popping tranquilizers like crazy.

To leave this job would be a big sacrifice for me. Besides I

DEAR ABBY: I am divorced, 40 years old and am madly in love with a man who is only 30. I have known and dated him for seven months. We are amazingly compatible and unbelievably good for each other. I was married for 17 years before, but I feel-more like a schoolgirl now than I felt 25 years ago.

I want to marry this beautiful, wonderful man, and he's been asking me for three months. He is big and husky and has gray hair. He looks more like 35, and I look like about 38 - in the dark.

Our relationship has reached the point where we either get married or say goodbye forever. My friends keep reminding me that when

____ Air Ambulance Goes Bird May Fly Coop Where No Roads Are

EDMONTON (CP) — Doctors do most of their travelling by Air Canada and have never seen a seriously-injured patient banging his head against the floor of a small plane over northern Alberta, says Dr. C. L. Pearson. The doctor, head of the Alberta Emergency Air Ambulance Service, advises his fellow doctors not to transport emergency cases by air—if there is a practical alterna-

Of course, most cases of ac cidents or serious illness in northern Alberta have to be brought to hospital by plane. There are either no roads or the distances are too great for

However, since the air ambu-lance service was established in 1959 by the Alberta govern-ment, only two patients have died while en route. One was an Indian baby who died in the air and the other was an adult who died in a hangar at Peace River while waiting for a plane.

Last year, the service made 158 flights, carrying 181 patients at a cost to the Alberta government of $34,000.

This does not include charges paid by the Workmen's Compensation Board for the evacuation of patients involved in industrial acci-dents and to the federal gov-

The federal govenment usually charters planes itself Indians but it sometimes uses the provincial service.

Because of extensive oil exploration in northern Alberta, there are air strips everywhere, although some of them can't be used in winter, says Dr. Pearson. Few areas are more than 40 miles from an air strip.

In addition, planes equipped with floats—or skis in winter —can land on most of the thousands of northern lakes. Patients requiring complicated treatment are needing only routine hospital care—such as for most cases of appendicitis-are usually flown to the smaller hospitals in the North at Fort Mc-Murray, High Level or Fort

Decisions about whether a patient requires evacuation are usually made by one of the 18 municipal nurses scattered throughout the North, unless a doctor happens to be in the area at the time.

About 80 per cent of the evacuations are necessary, says Dr. Pearson, who handles the air service as part of his job as director of medical services for Alberta.

Solving Onion Probl

liest history as an important food crop grown in every so-called "civilized" country of the northern and southern hemispheres. As a result, we hear of many different methods of handling this crop, each suited to the soil and weather conditions that pre-vail in some particular segment of the globe. In Canada, we have cultural practices brought by immigrants from the British Isles, Europe, Asia, India, Africa, and Australasia. This accounts for much of the controversy among gardeners who grow this crop, with the result that beginners often are deluged with conflicting ad-

Most of the problems brought to our attention in recent weeks by local gardeners indiscriminate buying of any seed marked "onions," and sowing the seed too late.

Success with maincrop storage onions depends on using a suitable variety, knowing the size the must attain before it will start to ripen, and sowing the seed early enough to ripen the crop during the dry, warm period in July.

Storage onions range from two to 3½ inches in diameter, and in shape from large globes to bulbs that are wide and flat. Maturing time varies from 98 days for the popular 'Autumn Spice' to 120 days for large globes. If you are one of the few gardeners who succeed with onions, you will continue with your present methods. If you have not had success, try this method, then adjust it as nec essary to suit your particular soil and conditions:

In late September, select a sheltered spot against a wall or building, or between shrubs, open to winter sun-shine. Mark an area 18 to 24 inches square which will become your seed bed.

Dig out about six inches of soil and mix it with an equal quantity of screened (h well rotted, (half-inch mesh) compost. Add some sharp sand if soil is heavy. Loosen the next six inches in the hole, then replace the soil mixture make a bed raised two or three inches above the surrounding level.

In gardens where water tends to collect over winter, make a trench around the bed as shown in panel 1 (top left)

Onions need a firm soil, so allow the bed to settle until late October or early November, at which time seed is sown thickly in the centre of the bed. If heavy rains occur before seeding, cover the bed with boards or plastic to keep the soil from becoming too wet and cold.

Outdoor seedlings will be ready to transplant in March to a prepared bed, spaced according to the variety being grown. Indoor seedlings will be ready by early April. The growing bed can also be prepared before the soil becomes saturated in late fall. Mix screened compost thoroughly (and sand if soil is heavy) to a depth of eight inches, raking many times to cultivate before transplanting in spring because onions like a soil that is settled and firm. sure to locate the bed well away from shrubs, trees,

Select the strongest seedlings for transplanting, those three to four inches long and approximately the size and shape of an ordinary lead pencil (panel 3). Those near outer edges of the sowing will have bulbs forming and may run to seed, so put these in rows for immediate use in salads and soups.

When setting the plants, only the roots go into the soil, with just enough soil pressed tightly against the base to hold the seedling upright. Onion bulbs must always be above soil level.

In May, start pulling the soil from the bulbs (panel 4), and have the bulbs completely free of all soil by June. Dust rapid growth and as a deterrant to onion fly.

During July, the bulbs swell rapidly, so check the diameter frequently with a rule (panel 5). Watering will be needed until the bulbs reach full size for the variety, after which no water must reach the roots from any source nearby

In a bone-dry soil, the tops will begin to mature during July. The gardener then pushes each bulb sideways to break some of the roots and slow down future growth (panel 5). A week later, a push in the opposite direction breaks the rest of the roots. The bulbs are tied in bunches and hung on a fence or wall in the sun to thoroughly dry and ripen. If rain threatens, rush them under cover A well ripened bulb for storage is shown at the top of panel 6. Beneath it is a "bull-necked" bulb still showing a green centre, which is unsuitable for storage and should be used as soon as possible.

Sunshine Eyed As Clean Energy

By YUKO NAKAMIKADO TOKYO (Reuter) - Japan is looking to a national "sunshine project" to develop solar and other "clean" energy sources by the year 2000 and help overcome dwindling oil

Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka told a recent press conference it is imperative to organize a major project on the lines of the massive United States Apollo space program which put man on the moon to meet growing energy

So far government and private institutions with only limited funds have been conducting separate researches.

But international co-operation now is taking shape. The U.S. and Japan in a recent cabinet-level conference on trade and economic affairs pledged co-operation in devel-oping new energy sources,

Exchange of information is already under way for devel-opment of solar energy and synthetic gas, with coal as the base material.

The Americans are also offering to make available to Japan technology on enriched uranium for a proposed joint project to expand nuclear power production.

OTHERS JOIN The trade ministry in Tokyo said scientists in Hawaii, in particular, are also proposing co-operation in developing geothermal energy.

A ministry spokesman said Australia and New Zealand are also interested in techni-cal co-operation with Japan to study the prospects of developing this energy source.

Japan's energy consumption in the year 2000 is expected to be five to eight times as much as the 1970 con-sumption, almost 71 per cent of which was oil.

The oil share is increasing. In 1971 it was 73.5 per cent, and Japan depends on im-ports for 99 per cent of its oil supplies—86 per cent from the politically volatile Middle

Development of "clean" energy is urgent for Japan in the light of a deteriorating environment through industrial pollution and increasing re-sistance to the construction of nuclear plants from "nuclear allergic" local residents, the trade ministry spokesman

The Japanese are extremely sensitive to atomic energy because thousands of people died in the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki in the Second World

"sunshine calls for solar, geothermal, synthetic gas and hydrogen energy to he put into practical operation by 2000. This would represent about 20 per cent of Japan's energy consumption in that year, a spokesman said.

Under the ministry's trial plan, the initial seven years will be spent on basic research on solar energy. A solar energy power plant with a generating capacity of 10,000 kilowatts by 1981 and two million kilowatts by 2000 will then be built.

Heating and air-conditioning by means of solar energy may come about by 1985, the

A geothermal power plant, using heat from the earth's in-terior will have a generating capacity of 300,000 kilowatts by 1990 under the plan.

The "sunshine project" with an estimated total budget of $7.7 billion is expected to start next fiscal year.

Paris Takes New Vietnam Role

SAIGON (Reuter) - Re-establishment of the French embassy in Saigon has focussed attention on the sizable French community left behind when France ended its colonial rule 19 years ago.

Diplomatic relations were broken off in 1966 when President Charles de Gaulle called' on the United States to pull its troops out of Vietnam,

But personal relations between the two peoples have always been warm and the opening of the embassy is expected to reinforce the affection between the Vietnamese the remaining 10,000

CHURCH TO RELAX

RULES FOR BURIAL VATICAN CITY (AP) The Vatican will soon relax rules barring Roman Catholic burial for divorced people who are remarried. But it will insist on bishops and priests making clear that this does not soften church opposition to divorce. Vatican officials said the new regulations would loosen restrictions and allow church burial for divorced persons 'who have maintained attachment to the church and have given some sign of repen-tance."

Officials in the Vatican Congregation For the Docrine of the Faith said the document is still under preparation and will be issued after completion of consultations with bish-ops around the world.

Under the 1918 Code of Canon Law, divorced people who had remarried were often denied Catholic burial as "public and manifest sinners." They were put in the same category as concubines, gangsters, dope peddlers and murderers.

The rule, however, was strictly enforced only in pre-

WHALE MEAT SEIZED

NEW YORK (UPI) - Se venteen cases of smoked whale meat being sold illegally have been seized. New York attorney-general Louis Lefkowitz announced Friday. Lefkowitz said the whale Lefkowitz said the whale meat violated a state law protecting endangered species.

A large supply of the meat was found at the Reese Finer Foods' warehouse and cans of smoked whale meat packed by Reese were being sold at as last month, Lefkowitz said.

Reese admitted violating the law and agreed to forfeit-remaining supplies and to re-frain from further sales of food made from endangered fish or wildlife, the attorneygeneral's office said. It also paid $800 in costs.

Macy's agreed to remove whale meat from its shelves.

our tropical fish which we know are by nature carnivorous. Will they be able to maintain themselves on a strictly vegetarian diet?—

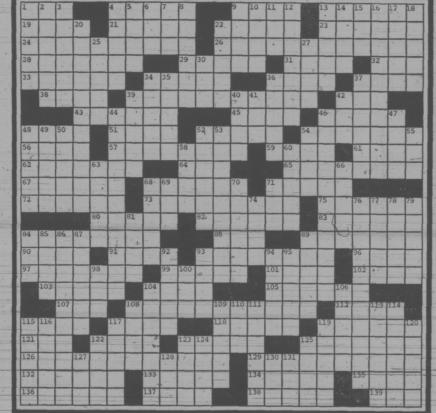

DEAR M.L.: Yes, your carnivorous fish should be able to maintain themselves on plant products provided these contain high quality (adequate essential amino acids) protein. Because plant products contain approximately six times less methionine and two and a half times less lysing than half times less lysine than the most critical proteins in your proposed vegetarian diet. The type of protein provided would be considerably more important for breeding fish or the young.

DEAR DR. MILLER: MY sister's cat weighs 30 pounds and she is proud of it. Now what do you think?—O.A.

DEAR O.A.: Thirty pounds could be very reasonable weight for, say, an ocelot. Certainly for the standard domestic house cat, it would be from 100 to 400 per cent too

It has occurred countless times in the 2,000 year history of the church. Yet each time it seems a sort of miracle.

Under persecution, instead of collapsing, the church thrives. This phenomenon is now occurring once again under the communist regime of Fidel

Persecution of Christians seems to be something all Communist dictatorships feel that of the Soviet Union, have learned balfheartedly, at most.

But Castro's Cuba is a relative newcom to the roster of red nations, and it still is putting some muscle into harassment of Chris-

According to Rev. Bibiano Molina, who has retired in Fort Worth, Tex., after spending 50 years as a Baptist pastor in Cuba, Casing 50 years as a Baptist pastor in cuba, castro's anti-church activity is producing the same result as every other persecution of Christians since the time of Nero.

Castro first tried to cripple Cuban churches which had depended on support from abroad by refusing to permit mission boards in the United States or other countries to send any money or manpower into Cuba.

"When this happened, Christian ministers and lay people of Cuba reacted by supporting themselves," Molina said.

The government continues to make life difficult for Cuban churches, according to the

"The government blocks off both ends of the street whenever a church holds a service," he said.

"The streets are used for baseball, soccer and track, and the games are conducted while church is in session. But this does not Cuban churches are filled with young people each Sunday.'

In an effort to avoid the overt appearance of persecution, which is out of favor with more advanced Communist countries, the Castro government used indirect harass-ments such as a law stipulating that preaching is allowed only inside a church, never outside in the open.

> in the mainstream of Christian thought through the centuries, the church is not idea-lized as a society of the spiritually immaculate and morally impeccable. The New Testament understands church as a community of sinners who admit that they are sinners and who strive to turn from self and sin to God and his purposes for man.

> In New Testament usage the terms "sinner" and "saint" are not opposites; they are complementary to one another. A "sinner" is not a person-irredeemably alienated from God. A "saint" is not a person of almost superhuman purity and excellence. In biblical thought we are

The resolution to create a readers' newspaper amidst the big business world of metropolitan newspapers was born when Heffernan, an idealistic young second-year Ca-mosun College student, ran in last year's federal election.

He took what he called a "people-ism" stand, but the people did not respond with votes. He bottomed the polls and lost his deposit.

He decided then that Victoria needed a quality weekly journal of the kind that would appeal to thoughtful readers. He wanted to provide a forum for "think-pieces" by anybody with something to say.

A backer appeared, ex-reporter Bill Lever became unpaid editor and various other unemployed friends helped out.

The first issues of the paper reflected both Heffernan's politics and his high ambitions. Stories focused on peo-

At the outset a total of 418 people were being employed. It cost $2,600 just to print

There was encouraging po ular reaction, including letters of congratulations and cheques for as much as $50.

The first crunch came about a month after the grand launching when Heffernan, high on his role of liberated publisher, ran a front-page story about gouging practices on local car sales lots.

Like a flash, Heffernan claims, advertisers with connections to the motor industry withdrew their business.

"One big dealer phoned me up and said he would not advertise again unless we printed a retraction.

'How could we retract a story like that?"

It was a psychological blow at a time when Heffernan's capital was beginning to dwindle. He was also finding that some advertisers were in no hurry to pay their bills once the advertising had been pub-

ARREST ME: AND THEY DID

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) A woman who demanded to be arrested during a police raid at a stag party March 31 on grounds of equal rights was sentenced to five days in jail when she appeared in provincial court Thursday.

June Fitzsimmons, 26, for-merly of Kitchener and now of Vancouver, was sentenced on two charges of intoxication, stemming from the March 31 raid, and for failing to appear in court on those charges April 30.

Charges relating to gambling, bootlegging and morals were laid against 30 other people after the raid on the hotel party, held to raise funds for several people appealing criminal convictions ed that police arrest her along with the others.

ANTELOPES INCREASE

EDMONTON (CP) — There has been a slight increase in Alberta's estimated over-all antelope population—to 10,460, the lands and forest department's fish and wildlife division said Friday.

The division said there will be a one-week antelope hunting season this year, Oct. 22-27. About 1,075 permits, similar to last year, will be issued for bucks only.

It is expected there will be a buck harvest of approximately 630 from the 1,305 animals available.

Massive War On Blindness

LONDON (FWF) massive operation is planned to stamp out river blindness throughout the Volta River basin — an area of 700,000 square kilometres comprising parts of seven countries:
Mail, Upper Volta, Niger, Ivory Coast, Ghana, Togo and Dahomey. Out of a population of 4.2 million, 57,000 have been blinded by this disease.
The project which will take The project, which will take 20 years to complete, has been agreed by the seven governments, after a study of the area by a World Bank

River blindness, or Oncho-cerciasis, is caused by the tiny larvae of a thread-like worm which circulates in the skin and also penetrates the eye. The disease is wide-spread throughout tropical Africa and in the Americas, especially Guatemala, Mexico and Venezuela. Recently it has been found in Colombia and the Yemen. Success in the Volta basin will bring hope to the 20 million Oncho-cerciasis-sufferers throughout the world.

In countries badly affected, 10 per cent of the total population and 20 per cent or more of adult males are blind. This lowers farming capacity so badly that farm-ing virtually ceases. The river valleys are deserted and the less fertile uplands become overcrowded. The economic effects are serious, especially in sub-Saharan West Africa.

The disease is transmitted by several species of black fly which breed in river valleys-hence the name river blindness. They are small, sturdy insects — two to six millimetres long. They bite superficially and pick up the larvae which develop to a stage at which they can infect other human beings bitten later on by the same fly. A heavily infected person may harbour hundreds of larvae in one milligramme of skin. The body reacts to dead larvae; the elastic layer of the skin is destroyed giving an appearance of premature old age.

Itching can be so intolerable that people are driven to suicide. The larvae attack all parts of the eye; they can be seen swimming in the anterior chamber and are found in the larvae attack and on the seen swimming in the anterior chamber and are found in the seen swimming and on the seen swimming and the cornea, retina and optic

The black fly, or buffalo gnat similium, often breeds. rapidly to form vast swarms. River fishing in the infested areas may be impossible or may rapidly lead to blindness. This deprives whole popula-tions of valuable protein. Workers building dams and hydro-electric power stations in Africa have to be protected against the fly — at heavy control of river blindness has baffled doctors and biologists. Two drugs are available. Intravenous injections with suramin kills the adult worms but has to be used with great caution because of toxic effects. Diethylcarbama zine kills the larvae but no the adults which means that Once blindness is fully established drugs and surgery are rarely effective. Loss of arrested in the early stages and drug treatment of se-lected early cases sometimes leads to spectacular improve-ment. But in badly infected areas, there are not enough doctors; only a minute pro-portion of cases can be given any kind of medical attention.

Research to discover safer and more effective drugs is being carried out on a pitifully small scale. In Central America, the fibrous nodules in which the larvae live under the skin of the scalp, ribs and elsewhere have been cut out by specially trained surgical teams for over 40 years. Transmission of the disease has scarcely been affected but blindness is now rare. The sheer size of the problem would prevent similar measures being introduced in Africa.

At present, the only effective method of control is to attack the black fly larvae by adding insecticides to the water in which they breed. Because they breed in running water, the same dose of insecticide may kill larvae for over 160 kilometres along a steadily flowing river, but normally larvae small streams must be found and dosed individually.

Luckily, the larvae are intensely susceptible to insecticides. In Kenya rivers, in the Uganda Nile, the Zaire reaches of the Congo, the Niger in Nigeria, the Ghana Volta and in Canada, DDT has been used for many years without harming other fauna. Certain insecticides, which break down in the water after now available but biolo control is still in a very early experimental stage.

In Kenya, a particular kind of black fly, Simulium Neavai, was completely eradicated by insecticides, river by river, and transmis-sion of river blindness was permanently ended. Unfortunately, that particular fly has a short flight range, unlike the predominant African black fly which can travel for great distances.

International experts are optimistic about the long term prospects of the Volta River eradication scheme because it is being planned as a single co-ordinated operation over a complete river basin which can be isolated from neighboring basins.

Foreign Legion Takes It Easy

By MORT ROSENBLUM

PAPEETE, Tahiti (AP) — The Beau Geste generation wouldn't believe it . . . the French Foreign Legion in hammocks and sarongs, build-ing roads in the South Seas without a camel in sight.

The legion just isn't the same old last resort for romantics and misfits spoiling for a fight. Here, the main task is helping build facilities to test the nuclear weapons to put their style of battle out of fashion.

The Tahiti contingent, officers here any is one of the cers here say, is one of the six remaining legion regi-ments. Only a unit in French Somaliland and another farther down the east coast of Africa in Madagascar are based outside of France.

And camels went out years ago.

"Yes, there are men who miss a good scrap," said Lt.Col. Henri Riou, a 26-year vethere. "Today we are moto-rized, modernized. There is no more folklore."

In Tahiti and in neighboring Polynesian islands, about 600 legionnaires work with 300 regular army men in a mixed regular army men in a mixed construction unit. Their 5th Regiment standard, strung with ribbons from Indochina in 1880 and later North Africa skirmishes, hangs in the office of their commander-a career

The legion left Indochina almost two decades ago, and independence in North Africa ended France's role there.

"We don't want war again, but if it's necessary, we'll be in the first row . . ." said Riou, second in command. "If someone said tomorrow we're going to Indochina, even as tourists, every man would vol-

Legionnaires here have dozens of nationalities and background and, Riouy says, the changed role around the world hasn't hurt recruitment. Some of the men ease right nto relaxed island life, and lozens have retired early to set-le down here with their girlriends and wives

Col. Alfred Baltzenjer, the army man who commands the mixed regiment, says he finds the legion admirably suited to its new role here.

"In Polynesia, at least, the legionnaire can still follow his dream. But, anyway, these men are professionals and they do what is required. We have no discipline problems

Ferry Talks Fail, Walkout Looms

Contract talks between the B.C. Ferry Authority and 2,000 unlicensed marine staff broke off Friday and a union spokesman said today signs are pointing towards a strike.

Bargaining has continued on and off all week and Friday reached "a complete stalemate," said Thornber.

He said he believes Transport Minister Robert Strachan has been ill-informed on the progress of talks and thinks the union has been offered an attractive package when actually it has been offered very little.

"We're not asking for the moon, just a package to live with until bargaining rights for all government employees

Thornber said the unlicensed branch had done as well or better in bargaining with the former Socred government.

"We've been living on promises — 'wait until next year' for so long we're beginning to feel like the B.C. Lions," he Bargaining between the authority and both licensed and unlicensed ferry employees began early last month. Licensed employees, who number about 400, are bargaining separately.

The only previous ferry strike involving the whole fleet was in 1968, lasting two weeks but coming in February. Ferry traffic is currently at a summer tourist peak, illustrated by the 11:15 p.m. sailing from Swartz Bay Friday night, needed to clean up 129 vehicles left after the usual 10 p.m. final

Strachan issued a ststement earlier this week saying the authority has gone "about as far as it can go" in the current contract dispute.

He said the one major unresolved issue is increased pay for statutory holidays and any improvement over time-and-ahalf paid now will have to be negotiated on a province-wide basis for all civil servants.

OTTAWA (CP) -- The government-owned Canada Development Corp. Friday extended its $290 million offer to buy control of the U.S.-based Texasgulf Corp., indicating its intention to fight American legal, and political eforts to block the controversial sale

The CDC announced that its offer to U.S. stockholders of the huge, international natural resources firm, would have expired Friday, is being extended for one week, and might be extended again beyond that.

CDC, which said its stock purchase offer was subject to temporary order of a U.S. federal court in Texas, also hinted it might buy more than the originally designated 10 million shares if legal hurdles can be cleared.

"In the event that more than 10 million shares are tendered prior to 5 p.m. New York time on Aug. 10, 1973, CDC will purchase at least 10 million shares and may elect to purchase all or part of the shares tendered in excess of 10 million shares," the announcement said.

Texasgulf officials, who went to court in Houston, Tex., to try to block the sale, brought in U.S. Senator Lloyd Bensten to testify Thursday that the Canadian purchase might hurt American national interests.

Texasgulf, with widespread mineral interests in several countries, now gets 68 per cent of its income from its Kidd Creek silver mine near Timmins, Ont., largest mine of its kind in the world.

SEATTLE (CP) - Gover-nor Dan Evans of Washington state is requesting the British Columbia government to supply water to Point Roberts, on an emergency basis, a spokesman said Friday.

Evans' press secretary, Jay Fredrecksen, said the letter to out the "critical situation" in

But it appeared unlikely the letter would get quick, if any, action. Barrett is still in Prince Edward Island at the premiers' conference and Reources Minister Bob Williams, who would be responsi-ble for water sales, was bound for Finland.

The Point Roberts water board requested Evans to intervene after a B.C. cial official refused to authorize Delta to sell water, board's chairman Harry wrote to Williams in February concerning water sales to tide Point Roberts over the late summer dry period. But, he said, Williams never replied.

Meanwhile, Sames said stringent restrictions on water are in force in the communi-Its million-gallon tank is down to about 234,000 gallons and the demand is increasing.

At a Thursday night meeting, the board chairman threatened to turn off the water supply to an estimated 850 Canadian users living on the 3,100-acre American pen-insula. He said if B.C.'s position is that Canadian re sources should be for Canadi then it followed American resources should be reserved for Americans.

Sames said Point Roberts' water is currently supplied from two wells. The 1,100 water metre users are charged $5 each a month for water and for a continuous drilling program to locate more wells.

The situation now is bad, he said. "If a house or church caught fire I don't know if we afford the drinking water to put it out.

The board would like to buy about 200,000 gallons a day from Delta, filling the tanks during off-peak hours. But if that avenue is closed, then water will have to be trucked

Sames said Blaine already supplies water to the southern area of Surrey.

However, the guerrillas were not on the airliner, and the Israelis allowed it to return to Beirut after they ques tined the 74 passengers and eight crew members for two hours at an Israeli airfield.

The informants said that the Palestinians the Israelis were trying to cap-ture was Dr. George Habash, head of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

Guerrilla sources said Habash was booked on the Baghdad-bound plane with Salah Salah, another of the front's representatives on the Palestine Liberation Organization's executive committee, and Abdul Wahab Kayali, the secretary-general of the Iraqibacked Arab Liberation

There also is speculation that Moscow may be setting the stage for another world communist confernce that would be called to deal with the problem of China.

The press campaign erupt ed last Tuesday with a long article in the Communist party newspaper Pravda that many diplomats assume was written in the party central committee. The article accused Peking of being "hostile to the socialist world," and of having effected "a complete rupture from Marxist-Leninism" and "complete deviation from the common policy of socialist

The Pravda article Tuesday was written as a commentary on the meeting in the Crimea two weeks ago between Leonid Brezhnev, general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party, and party leaders from eastern Europe and Mongolia.

At the moment, the Sino-Soviet quarrel seems to focus primarily over Soviet policy aims in Europe. The Soviets have been the chief promotors of a European security con-ference, the first stage of which was held in Helsinki
